

July 1, 2015 Update

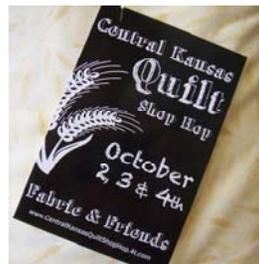

Well here it is—July already. Can you believe the year is half over? As always I have some really great plans to make table runners and wall hangings for the 4th of July and they didn't get done...again. Maybe if I start now while I'm in the red white and blue mood I will have them for next year. If I remember right that is what I said last year. We will be closed Saturday to celebrate the 4th (or in my case baby-sit with a very nervous, anxious dog). Perhaps I can spend the day stitching on next year's project.

Karen got this embroidery water pump stitched up. To give it an old antique look she used a tan mottled fabric for the background and a reproduction print for the border. The pattern is by a designer from Overbrook Kansas. We have a new shipment of patterns in the store.

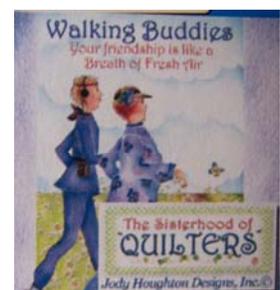

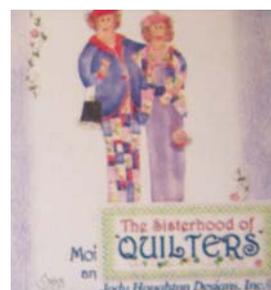

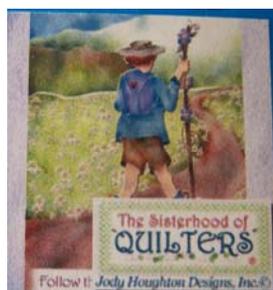

Check out this year's Shop Hop shirts. We have plenty of sizes medium through 3X. They are going fast so pick one up as soon as you can.

This year's Shop Hop fabric is a really pretty cream colored background that features a wheat pattern. All the shop owners are excited about our quilts this year. I've started working on mine and I think its coming out gorgeous.

If you are looking for a cute little gift for a quilt buddy we have these new microfiber cleaning cloths printed with quilters in mind. They are great for cleaning glasses, computer screens or a dozen other uses.

FABRICS YARN CLASSES NOTIONS STENCILS BOOKS PATTERNS

July 1, 2015 Update

Don't forget to pick up your Row by Row kit. We also kitted up the border and backing so you could finish off our row as a table runner.

I know it seems a bit early to think Christmas, but it is only 6 months away. We have some really great Christmas fabrics that are arriving. I think I'm going to take this piece of fabric and make a cute Christmas shopping bag.

For those of you that are starting early on making the microwaveable bowls, potato bags, and tortilla warmers for Christmas gifts, we have the Wrap-N-Zap 100 % cotton batting you need.

I've recently taken several of the knitting classes that we have offered and I'm not sure what's worse right now my fabric addiction or the yarn addiction. We just got in a shipment from Knitting Fever that had this beautiful variegated Louisa Harding Noema and Debbie Bliss Eurobaby. They are both absolutely gorgeous. I kind of think I need a ball of each so I don't have to make a decision.

Have a happy and safe 4th of July weekend. I hope you have a little bit of time to stitch up something wonderful.
